Glenn Clark (1882-1956) founder of the Camps Farthest Out, lived a life fully devoted to God. Prayer encompassed every part of Clark's being and he believed that prayer is powerful and can change peoples' lives for all eternity. His writings are filled with a myriad of stories exemplifying the power of prayer and relinguishment of one's self to Christ. He has written over 50 books on the topic of Christian living and how one can learn to walk as Jesus walked. Clark is the author of The Man Who Talks with the Flowers, the story of George Washington Carver, which has sold over 400,000 copies. He also authored the classic books I Will Lift Up Mine Eyes and The Soul's Sincere Desire. Glenn Clark was a track coach and English professor at Macalester College in St. Paul, MN. He traveled the world in order to encourage people to go "furthest out" in their walk with Christ. Although Clark has now passed into eternity, his legacy continues to impact the world: he wrote, spoke, and lived out the model of a living breathing prayer life centered on Jesus Christ.

"There is only one prayer that I pray regularly every morning of my life-and that is that I may abide in the Kingdom of Heaven every moment of the day, and inspire others to abide there also." (Glenn Clark, I Will Life Up Mine Eyes.)
